An annual crop census and summary reports on other project functions are prepared on each operating project served by facilities constructed or rehabilitated by the Bureau of Reclamation. Legislative acts of 1924 and 1939 made the annual crop census the basis for determining equitable amounts due the United States as annual installments on certain types of construction repayment contracts.

This continuing statistical series has proved valuable to analysts preparing economic and financial studies of Reclamation projects. The history of irrigation development, crop production, and other functions provides basic data for investigating proposed new projects and extending existing ones. This series has been used in the settlement of disputes arising from controversies over water charges and in adjusting repayment contracts. Although the report format has been revised from time to time, care has been taken to preserve continuity in important statistical series.
